FROM THE PRESIDENT

We have been listening to the word 'UNITY' for a long time now. That word is in our commUNITY every day of our lives. This year the Center has a lot of new ideas for our commUNITY. We are going to need help from each and every one of you to make the dreams, come true.

The P.L.W.A. Committee has formed for the '91 benefit year. They have many plans for fund-raising events this year.

C.G.R.A. is hosting the FIRST gay rodeo for Colorado Springs, in September.

The United Court has many benefits and social events planned for the year. With Coronation 16 to fall in August this year.

Pikes Peak Metropolitan CommUNITY Church has many new ideas that may interest you this coming year.

I could go on for hours on what this commUNITY has to offer to our lesbian and gay brothers and sisters. The point I am trying to make is that we need to show our support when we can. Yes sometimes its hard leaving that warm house to bear the cold, but try to remember. With out the support and UNITY we wouldn't have a commUNITY!!

On a different note - The Children's Ball was a success once again. This year we didn't have as much help from our community, however the people who were there did a fantastic job. We had over 30 children at the Ball, and all of them seemed to enjoy themselves. Most of the children left the building with a large bag of toys that they won playing the games that were provided. Santa Claus (Ed Sells) came down to pay a visit on the children and gave them each a present with their name on it. You should have seen the look in their eyes when they each opened their presents. I could guess that Rick Brown had a special feeling of satisfaction when he saw this. He is one of the persons who took the time to go shopping for these children. After shopping came the time to wrap and label each gift. Many people donated cookies and candy. The children soon learned that these items also fit in their toy bags too! All in All, we had a Ball, and will be working on scheduling our next children's ball this coming October. So from now to then start saving your little stuffed animals and toys for prizes at the games. A special thanks to Emperor XV Mark and Empress XV Anita for their support.

Thanks, See you on February 9th,
David Eidson/President/P.P.G.L.C.C.

Together in Pride

...it's this year's International Gay Pride theme. Three small words that say an awful lot. No community becomes a noticeable force for change unless it stands together. One of the best defenses in an unfriendly world is an armor of pride. It gives us a resilient dignity that makes us a force to be dealt with. No longer will we be so easily disenfranchised by government, politicians, business, and the "straight" society in general if we stand together in indomitable Pride.

We are beginning to see more attention and cocessions being given to us. Denver's Equal Protection Amendment and anonymous testing are just two examples of late. These things have come about because gay and lesbian people are recognized as a community that can now effect change in society as a whole.

The PrideFest '90 PrideWeek Celebration and Parade helped unify our community, in one week, as no other event ever has. It boosted pride in ourselves and it was very visible to the outside world that we are here to stay, unified together, and visibly loud and proud. Since the PrideFest Celebration, change has been effected. I would like to think our very visible and united presence on June 24th helped in some of our goals being recently attained. No other event in the region has the impact to the "straight" and gay world as does our PrideFest Celebration.

As the brain child of the GLCCC, the PrideFest Committee will strive to unite our community to a greater degree by building a bigger and better Pride Celebration which will strengthen the lesbian and gay community even more in the future. This strength and pride will help us attain any goals we set.

So get ready for a bigger and flashier Pride Parade and Celebration in 1991. It not only makes you feel proud, it also shows others why they should feel good about you.

Help us stand TOGETHER IN PRIDE on June 30th and throughout 1991.

The PrideFest '91 Committee is a project of the Gay and Lesbian Community Center of Colorado. It is a diverse group of individuals who have come together to organize and celebrate Gay Pride in Colorado.

June of 1991 is our next scheduled Pride celebration. The PrideParade will take place on Sunday, June 30th. The PrideFest Committee is currently planning for activities that will be occurring during the 1991 Pride Celebration. The Committee currently meets on the first and third Wednesdays of every month at the GLCCC at 7:00 p.m.

FOR A TEACHER FIGHTING AIDS, LOVE AND LOSS

BY MICHAEL WINERIP

When Tom Bradley realized that the illness inside him was going public, he envisioned headlines: "GAY AIDS TEACHER! PARENTS REVOLT! CLASSROOM MAYHEM!"

Mr Bradley is an educator of great pride, dignity and skill. Even Eric Novak, whom Mr. Bradley kept back in the fifth grade, said, "Mr. Bradley, he's cool." And professional. His private life was private. He lives in Queens, a 50-mile commute from his school here and attends Mass in Greenwich Village. He always shielded his social life from colleagues.

Nothing shook this until Mr. Bradley filed suit for his life. The AIDS had worsened. He'd lost 45 pounds. Doctors at John Hopkins Oncology Center believed a type of bone marrow transplant traditionally done for cancer could prolong his life, because he had a perfect donor, his twin brother. The procedure was set for June 4.

"Lymphoma cancer," Mr. Bradley told them at school. Then on June 1, Empire Blue Cross said it would not pay for the $150,000 operation, calling it experimental. Doctors protested, terming it state-of-the-art surgery, done successfully on four other AIDS patients. They warned that if delayed, Mr. Bradley might grow too ill for surgery.

Blue Cross stuck by its monetary principles. Mr. Bradley sued. "I considered filing as John Doe," he said. But the risk of scorn from this middle-class village seemed small when weighed against a fight for life. He knew the law protected him and asked lawyers at Lambda Legal Defense, gay rights advocates, "If someone comes after me, will you help me?" They would.

When the story broke (AIDS TEACHER FIGHTING FOR LIFE) Mr. Bradley wrote to friends at school, apologizing, "I'm sorry for not being honest, for saying I had cancer," he wrote. "I'm sorry I lied." He wrote Daisy Krasensky, the school secretary, a grandmother. "I'd always done anything for Tom. He's a gifted teacher," she said. "I'd never really talked to him about this part of his life. I think he tried to tell me once years ago, but he never actually did. I guessed it for a long time. Sure, you know. It didn't matter."

"The time he tried to tell me, he asked me to pray for a friend with AIDS. Tom had tears in his eyes. He said, 'You know what this means to me?' I thought, 'My God, he's involved with this person.' But I never said it out loud. I didn't know what to say. I feel ashamed now. He didn't know how his school friends would feel about homosexuals."

Mr. Bradley underestimated them. He assumed that mainstream American hearts were like People magazine covers: open only to a pretty woman or child who got AIDS from a transfusion. Within days people of Bayport like Daisy Krasensky collected more than 1,000 signatures protesting the decision. Never was there a more popular cause here.

In 18 years, he had touched so many from Room 209 at Sylvan Avenue School. They all had a Mr. Bradley story. Each year he led a class trip to Washington that was so popular that 75 parents volunteered to chaperone 100 kids. They used a lottery to decide which parents could go. Mr. Bradley's fifth graders built motors, raced meal worms, had a beehive. He brought computers to the district. If Mr. Bradley wore a Russian winter hat, in two weeks half the fifth grade had Russian hats.

How could they desert the 1986 Bayport Teacher of the year? He arrived hours before school and stayed late - for a teacher's wage. It angered them that Blue Cross would deny the chance for longer life to one of the highest forms of life, a devoted public school teacher. During Mr. Bradley's legal battle, vans of supporters rode to Manhattan to be by his side in court. They ran bake sales, raffles, a dinner, raising $15,000 for his legal fees.

As to the root of his AIDS, people started from the premise that Mr. Bradley is a gem, and fit things together according to their ability to understand. Eric Novak, a seventh grader, explained how Mr. Bradley got AIDS: "Blood transactions and fluid mix - ups and that kind of thing," Donna Foley, whose daughter had Mr. Bradley years ago, said, "I always assumed the man was gay, a mature unmarried man. Not that it meant anything to me. It was never ever mentioned, not by kids, not by adults. He was Mr. Bradley." Support letters filled Mr. Bradley's lavender scrapbook. When he won his case three weeks ago, Bayport celebrated. A Tom Bradley Day is planned.

Then on Tuesday, while preparing for surgery, John Hopkins doctors discovered that Mr. Bradley has developed an incurable eye virus that makes the transplant impossible. The eye virus is new, doctors said. It developed during the weeks Blue Cross stood on its principles. Mr. Bradley, Bayporters, the doctors, lawyers all had the same basic quote. Life can be too sad for words.

GOING UNDERGROUND WITH QUEER NATION

by Sandra Sparks

The holiday crowd downtown on Saturday night, Dec. 1, heard a whole new sound along with the jazz, rock and Christmas music which filled the streets and alleys of Underground Atlanta: "We're here, we're queer- get used to it!"

Over 60 gays and lesbians, many of whom were out of state visitors in town for the ACT UP Centers for Disease Control demonstration held Monday, Dec. 3, strolled through Underground hand in hand (and sometimes mouth to mouth) during the second "Queers' Night Out" organized by the new Atlanta chapter of Queer Nation.

Queer Nation is an organization dedicated to heightening gay and lesbian awareness in "mainstream" society through non-violent "queer visibility actions," such as visiting "straight" restaurants, bars and other notorious heterosexual habitats in highly visible groups. Coordinators of the event said that visibility actions give participants more choice in how they will demonstrate their activism on an individual basis, whether by simple presence or by taking part in activities such as "kiss-Ins."

Dan Ross, one of the coordinators for the Atlanta chapter of Queer Nation, told The News that during the first "Night Out," held recently at Jock's and Jill's, a midtown restaurant, the manager became upset when he saw women kissing each other, but called the police when the men joined in. "We will give managers a hard time, but we cooperate fully with the police," Ross said.

This proved true at the beginning of the Underground Atlanta gathering when the Queer Nation crowd cheered as Dan initially greeted them. Security officers rushed forward crying "get the guy in the white hat!" Assuming Mr. Ross was the leader, they whisked him up the escalator and out the main entrance. The group followed, but gave the officers no trouble as security made it clear that the demonstrators were welcome to come in and shop, but unseemly behavior like shouting would not be tolerated. Mr. Ross cooperated when the officers told him he could not enter with the group but could rejoin them when they reached Kenny's Alley.

The colorful gang drew much attention as they sashayed down Old Alabama Street, but very little of it was negative. One man cheered and held up his baby for a better look. One well-dressed, upwardly mobile straight couple (holding hands, of course) did a self-righteous double-take, rising up out of their Gucci shoes at the sight of lesbians "sucking Face" in front of Banks and Shane's. The only real problem occurred when a security officer rushed a lesbian couple he saw kissing in the food court (bypassing several other gay and lesbian couples doing the same, choosing instead the most attractive female couple there). A heated argument broke out between the officer and the women. One of the couple, Dana Schuerholz of Seattle, Washington, later said, "I couldn't believe it. In Seattle I have no problems kissing my girlfriend in public. No one hassles us." The incident was ended when a security supervisor intercede on their behalf and told the male officer to leave the women alone.

The demonstrators then broke up to enjoy the night spots and stores of Underground in smaller groups. Fifteen or so ended the evening at Lilly's Pub on Kenny's Alley, dancing and singing to the piano bar music of Perry Barton. No one minded the kissing and hand-holding except a bunch of under-aged high school boys leering through the window, making obscene gestures. The only protests occurred when the waitress offered Miller Lite. "Miller Lite!?!" Several gay customers questioned. In no uncertain terms, they let it be known that Bud lite would be far more appropriate.

When all was said and done, the Queer Nation left Underground Atlanta cordially thanking each security officer for their hospitality, and were given an assurance by the Underground security force that Queer Nation's safety, not just their sexuality, was secure.

COLORADO SPRINGS ANTI - DISCRIMINATION ORDINANCE

An anti - discrimination ordinance protecting gay and lesbian people is being proposed in Colorado Springs. We need your help! Here are the basic facts:

What the ordinance does: It prohibits discrimination in employment, housing, and public accommodations on the basis of sexual orientation or other specified grounds (race, color, religion, creed, national origin, ethnicity, age, sex, marital status and disability).

Where the ordinance stands politically: The city's Human Relations Commission will be proposing the ordinance to City Council. The commission is a group of 15 citizen volunteers appointed by city Council to advise it with regard to human relations matters. The ordinance as originally drafted by the commission did not cover sexual orientation, but as a result of our efforts the commission amended the ordinance to prohibit discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation and thereby protect lesbian and gay people. The ordinance will not be formally submitted to City Council by the commission until after the April 2 election, in which six of the nine City Council seats will be contested.

What the ordinance does not do: It does not address the question of the lesbian and gay family. Therefore, employers are not required to provide benefits to members of the gay or lesbian family of an employee. The ordinance also does not apply to employees of governmental bodies other than the city; therefore, it does not apply to public school employees, or county, state, or federal employees.

What gay and lesbian people are doing: A group has organized to secure the enactment of this ordinance. We have achieved our first major goal - the amendment of the ordinance to include sexual orientation. We are working on involving all lesbian and gay people in this effort and on building a broad coalition - gay and straight alike - in support of the ordinance.

To become involved, or for further information, call, John Miller 637-9632, Robin Miller 634-0997. The next meeting will be on January 31st, 1991 at 6:30 P.M.
